

12 04 2019

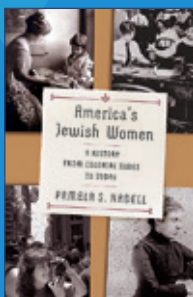

Free and open to the public.

Pamela Nadell

American University

America's Jewish Women: A History from Colonial Times to Today

In this groundbreaking history, Pamela Nadell asks what it means to be a Jewish woman in America. Weaving together stories from the colonial era's matriarch, Grace Nathan, and her great-granddaughter, poet Emma Lazarus, to union organizer Bessie Hillman and the great justice Ruth Bader Ginsburg, Nadell shows two threads binding the nation's Jewish women: a strong sense of self and a resolute commitment to making the world a better place. Informed by the shared values of America's founding and Jewish identity, America's Jewish women—the well-known and the scores of activists, workers, wives, and mothers whose names linger on among their communities and families—left deep footprints in the history of the nation they call home.

Books will be available for purchase and signing after the talk, courtesy of Chaucer's Books.

For further information contact:

Richard D. Hecht
ariel@religion.ucsb.edu

Wednesday
December 4, 2019
4:00 p.m.
Corwin Pavilion
UC Santa Barbara

www.jewishbookcouncil.org

Maeve Devoy
maeve@cappscenter.ucsb.edu
(805) 893-2317

שלו יעסוק בלימד הוא שוכח